About KUSMS

Established in 1996 as a collaborative venture between Kathmandu University and Dhulikhel Hospital, Kathmandu University School of Medical Sciences (KUSMS) is one of Nepal's most respected institutions for medical education. Dhulikhel Hospital, a non-governmental, non-profit hospital built with the support of the local community, serves as the primary teaching hospital for the university.

KUSMS is renowned for its excellence in education, its commitment to community-based healthcare, and its highly experienced faculty. The MBBS program is conducted in English and follows a curriculum similar to that of India, making it a popular choice among Indian students. Students benefit from a holistic academic environment supported by practical training at the Dhulikhel Hospital, which is known for its compassionate and quality care.
